

* I Am A Starving Pig

- You can likely look at me and see that I am not being fed enough.
- You should NOT be able to see my body's bone structure. No hip bones, no spine, no bones in the face.
- My hair should be somewhat shiny and should lay flat. (except my mohawk-that can stand)
- My eyes should be bright, dull and lifeless looking eyes can indicate that I am being starved.
- If my head looks unproportionally large compared to my body, I likely don't get enough to eat.
- If my legs are bowed or I have difficulty walking constantly, I may be a starved pig.
- If my backbone is curving upwards causing my stance to be hunched over, I am likely starved.
- If my hair is super thick and "fuzzy", yet I am not a piglet, this can indicate I am being starved.
- If I frequently rest my head on surfaces, this is because I do not have the energy to hold it up. Energy comes from food.
- If my energy level is low and I do not occasionally run and play, this can be a sign of starvation.
- If you are being told to limit my food to ridiculously small amounts, and I am not overweight, I am likely being starved.
- Starving pigs should not be confused with sick pigs. You should consult your vet/someone with experience if you're not sure.
- If I am starving, in my quest to find food, you may mistaken "aggressiveness" for hunger.
- If I am not getting enough to eat, there is likely nutritional deficiencies too. Poor skin, pigmentation and rough coats can occur.
- If I am in my growing years (the first 5), but not growing much, my diet may need to be adjusted.
